

Malcolm Correll Service Award

This award will be given periodically, but not necessarily each year, to members whose informal and formal contributions to the society over a sustained period of time merit special recognition. Formal contributions include elective and appointive offices held and informal contributions include committee participation and personal assistance and service to members.

Selection Process:

The Malcolm Correll Service Award should be mentioned at a semimonthly Rocky Mountain Bonsai Society Meeting and in the newsletter as open for nominations in the early fall. Any verbal nominations are to be given to the society president. The president is to bring forth any nominations to the executive committee either in meeting or by phone for consensus. If a recipient is selected, arrangement will be made to give the award at the annual Christmas party.
